

Wednesday -- An Opportunity to Sound Off

Emeritus College arranged for an "open to the public" talk this Wednesday afternoon at Rossmoor (a "retirement community", where at least one resident per unit, must be 55). It's scheduled to last two hours. Not to worry. I know better than to talk this long. I'd nod off too.

There will be plenty of time for questions and input. I'll also use this opportunity to profile several of the Afghans we've been working with and around (unsung heroes and people who make our work more difficult). I always have new stories for the vets.

Bring a fog horn. A few short blasts during the presentation may be necessary. They snooze, we lose. Yes, we. We're in this together. It's way beyond me, now.

Best Regards,

Budd

When : Wednesday February 9th 1-3pm

Where: Rossmoor Hillside Clubhouse Vista Room off of Tice Valley Rd. 1001 Golden Rain road, Walnut Creek

This Just In From Kabul

I just received this email from Basir this morning, one of our Afghan program directors in Kabul;

"Today we distributed clothes for Chama Babrak IDP camp to 118 families mans and women's were there and picked up clothes and were very happy and thanks from the people of United State to help with winter clothes thier families in cold Winter ."

The number of families receiving clothing from TIE during the past few weeks is now over 400 and rising.
